Kathy Moore, College of the Atlantic, 2008

This poster (on the left) was created for the use of The Downeast AIDS Organization located in Ellsworth, Maine. The organization frequently hangs up posters all around Maine and attends various events in order to inform the public about facts of AIDS. This poster is directed towards woman to empower them to take responsibility for their sexual health and protect themselves against AIDS. The poster, completed fall 2008, measures 22" x 34" and has an empty space on the bottom to allow the organization to write information about events, etc.

TECHMED

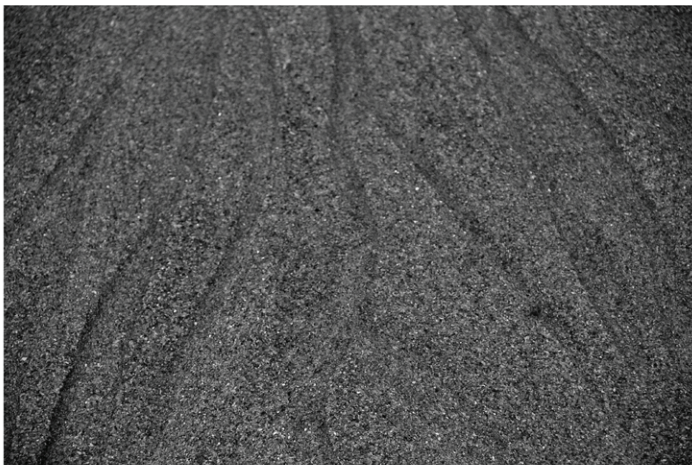

SERVICES

This piece was designed winter 2010 for the cover of Tech-Med Services' product catalog. The catalog is due to be printed late spring 2010. Each graphic was hand designed using Adobe Illustrator.

“Cactus and Glove” was created fall 2008. The photographs were placed together to evoke certain feelings like mystery, strangeness, and pain in the viewer.

“Winter Self-Portrait 2” was produced winter 2009 as part of a project exploring the concept of woman and how the concept applied to myself. A digital SLR camera was used to shoot the photographs and when printed they measure 13” x 28.”

Once Inside...

Why Would One Leave?

This website, created summer 2009, was designed to explore if one could live in the internet; never leaving their home. Each icon links to a necessity that a person needs to live or something they may want to help them live.
